Lost Part of his Brain.

Five weeks ago to day a Bohemian named Gos Drabrandt met with a serious accident, the result of which was that his skull was free tured, a portion of the brain gouged out and afterward removed, his nose pretty well demolished, two ribs broken and his body badly bruised. Two days ago he resumed work, and considers himself well, though not strong. The remarkable recovery of the man after the loss of a portion of the brain, and the retention of all his faculties still in their normal condition, make this one of the most curious cases on Drabrandt was employed in the establishment of the Northwestern Fertilizer Company, located on Forty fourth street and in the visinity of the stock yards packing houses. He had ascended to a hor zontal shaft about sixteen feet above the floor for the purpose of oiling it. He walked along a temporary scaffolding near the shaft and reached his left hand over it, and in doing so the sleeve of his shirt caught in a projecting screw or bolt. The shafe was whirling about at the rate of three hundred revolutions a minute, and Drabrandt, of course, went with it. How long he was carried around the shafe he does not know, as he became senseless. Pries. Last Spring your Pills were recommended to me; I used them (but with little faith.) I am now a well man, have a good appetite, digestion perfect, regular stools, piles gone, and I have gained forty bounds solid flesh. They are worth their weight in gold.

Rev. 18 L. CIMPSON, Louisville, Ky. ception of his boots. The concussion against the floor aroused him momentarily, and he remembers that he started to his feet, but again fell senseless. Others in the building heard the fall and rushed into the room to find Drabrandt halpless and unconscious. A messenger was dispatched for a physician, but he was not able to find one until he reached the office of Dr. F. Crane, at No. 1493 South Halsted street. Dr. Crane hastened to the scere, but did not reach the place until two hours after the accident, and just as the injured man's associates were about to place him in a carriage to be sent home. He was returning to consciousness, but the doctor insisted on making an examination. He found the skull crushed in on the left side of the head and just above the car, and the brain protruding. The cut in the scale was about five inches in length and irregular in shape. The temporal bone was broken into several pieces, and the portion of the brain protruding seemed to have been pushed out as if by the bolt which caught his sleeve. It was still held at one end to the brain mass, and was about the shape and nearly DYE It imparts a Natural Color, acts Instanthe size of a man's index finger. The doctor saw that it was so mangled that it would be utterly useless to attempt to replace it. He clipped it off and removed the broken pieces of skul, including a wing of the sphenoid bone on that side of the head. The exposed portion of the brain was dressed, and, fortunately, there was no hemorrhage from it. Three facial arteries had to be ligatured, and some portion of the nasal bones had to be removed. At the man's home his ribs were set and the wounds more carefully dressed. On the fourth day the prein had nealed sufficiently to warrent no further anxiety about that. On the seventh day erysipelasset in and came near ending the man's life, but be railed from this attack. On the fourteenth day the patient went out of the house, and two days later his physician was discharged. On Monday last he resumed his work, as before stated.

A Times reporter saw Drabrandt at his home at No. 701 Hinman street, on last night, and questioned him closely to discover, if possible, any abnormal condition of mind or body, which as before stated. would meet certainly be expected from the loss of so much of the brain. He says he has retained full possession of all his faculties, and has never been disturbed by indications of paralysis er loss of senses so far as he knows. He is attacked by heat however, and at times is troubled by his "brain seeming to get hot," as he terms it, and his head aches. His wife says that she has noticed nothing unusual in his actions except that "he gets mad awful easy now," whereas he was, before the accident, one of the kindest and mildest tampared of men. He haccomes ward mildest tempered of men. He becomes vexed at the children and wants to whip them for the most trivial offenses. He has been perfectly rational in his talk and actions, aside from that. she says, except on one occasion. On Saturday he was at work in the basement of the house and became heated. Suddenly he rusked up stairs, out on the street and three blocks away as fast as he could go. He then stopped and walked back to the nouse, wondering how he got out. The man is forty-five years of age and got out. The man is forty-new years of age and has an iron constitution. There is now a hole through his skull nearly the size of a silver quarter of a dollar, which the physician says will never be covered, except by the scalp, which has now healed over it. Drabrandt is foreman in the establishment of the company for which he works, and is allowed now to return which he works, and is allowed now to return and draw his salary without doing any heavy

The man's recovery is almost marvelous. Cases of a similar nature are said to be raro in which the patient is restored to unimpaired heath. Dr. Crane gave c natant attention to his patient, but he thinks that if Drabrandt had been any other than a Bohemian—a race hard to kill—he could not have been rescued from death.- Chicago
